April Program Highlights

The Inside Scoop
Ethics at the End of Life

Deb Pow, a social worker with Hospice, will lead this discussion focusing on what is most typically important to the senior population in regards to ethics at end of life: who has the capacity to make decisions; differences between medical power of attorney and financial power of attorney; issues that arise when there isn't an advanced directive; what happens when there are differences of opinion within the family unit; what are the differences between legal and moral ethics
